EASY DOESN'T ENJOY A GOOD FIGHT

| It seems that some people have lost it. Call it a passion, an unwillingness to quit, a relentless pursuit - a primal calling that consumes. It's the last stand between convenience, detachment, and the easy way.

This intangible sets Howie's pre-dawn wake-up call, pushes his sled into the La Jolla surf, and charts the course to the open sea beyond. Battling past the break is only the beginning, the hunt for the elusive yellow tail tuna is on.

Howie's home waters have seen a record-setting season with high numbers of tuna flooding the southern California coast, but not so fast - dinner doesn't come that easy. With over 20 miles logged on the paddles, he knows all too well that everything tastes better when you've put in the blood, sweat, and sore muscles for it.
